

To whom it may concern:

It would appear there are a lot of desperate, uncreative marketing people who cannot find legitimate ways to market their products. Therefore, they want the government to force people to listen to their dribble. I have been extremely grateful that the State of Indiana has allowed us the option of abstaining from participation in these ploys. This is a great service that has saved us a great deal of time and significantly enhanced our quality of life.

I have been extremely pleased with the results of the no-call list. The only weakness it appears to have is that some organizations are apparently still allowed to call to beg for money. I believe we may have received calls from some political parties, as well. Overall, however, the program has been a huge success.

The very people we are attempting to avoid are now asking the Federal government to require us to allow them to invade our privacy. If I want to communicate with these people, I can seek them. I do not desire to have them contact me. I should not be forced to allow these unwanted electronic trespassers to consume my time and energy, and add to my overall level of stress.

I respectfully request you not repeal our freedom to enjoy meals in peace, sleep without interruption, and enjoy our time together as a family.

Sincerely,
